DETAILED ACTION

Double Patenting

The nonstatutory double patenting rejection is based on a judicially created doctrine grounded in public policy (a policy reflected in the statute) so as to prevent the unjustified or improper timewise extension of the "right to exclude" granted by a patent and to prevent possible harassment by multiple assignees. See In re Goodman, 11 F.3d 1046, 29 USPQ2d 2010 (Fed. Cir. 1993); In re Longi, 759 F.2d 887, 225 USPQ 645 (Fed. Cir. 1985); In re Van Ornum, 686 F.2d 937, 214 USPQ 761 (CCPA 1982); In re Vogel, 422 F.2d 438, 164 USPQ 619 (CCPA 1970); and, In re Thorington, 418 F.2d 528, 163 USPQ 644 (CCPA 1969).

A timely filed terminal disclaimer in compliance with 37 CFR 1.321(c) may be used to overcome an actual or provisional rejection based on a nonstatutory double patenting ground provided the conflicting application or patent is shown to be commonly owned with this application. See 37 CFR 1.130(b).

Effective January 1, 1994, a registered attorney or agent of record may sign a terminal disclaimer. A terminal disclaimer signed by the assignee must fully comply with 37 CFR 3.73(b).

Claims 35-38 and 49 are rejected under the judicially created doctrine of obviousness-type double patenting as being unpatentable over claims 6-9, 16 of U.S. Patent No. 6,283,912 in view of Hancock (6,331,157). The patented claims do not include a drive member whereby the rails are moveable relative to one another. Hancock shows a retractor system comprising a retractor blade 52 attached to a rail 24. A second rail is provided and the rails are movable relative one another by a drive member 22. It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to provide the claimed system with a second rail and a drive member to move the rails relative to one another, as taught by Hancock, in order to provide maximum adjustability of the system.

Claims 35 and 36 are rejected under the judicially created doctrine of obviousness-type double patenting as being unpatentable over claims 16-18 of U.S.

Patent No. 6,283,912 in view of Hancock (6,331,157). The patented claims do not include a drive member whereby the rails are moveable relative to one another.

Hancock shows a retractor system comprising a retractor blade 52 attached to a rail 24.

A second rail is provided and the rails are movable relative one another by a drive member 22. It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to provide the claimed system with a second rail and a drive member to move the rails relative to one another, as taught by Hancock, in order to provide maximum adjustability of the system.

Claims 51 and 52 are rejected under the judicially created doctrine of obviousness-type double patenting as being unpatentable over claims 6-10 of U.S. Patent No. 6,283,912. Although the conflicting claims are not identical, they are not patentably distinct from each other because the subject matter claimed in the instant application is fully disclosed in the patent and is covered by the patent since the patent and the application are claiming common subject matter, as follows: the difference between the application claims and the patent claims lies in the fact that the patent claims include more elements and are thus much specific. Thus the invention of the patent claims are in effect a "species" of the "generic" invention of the application claims. It has been held that the generic invention is "anticipated" by the "species". See In re Goodman, 29 USPQ2d 2010 (Fed. Cir. 1993). Since the application claims are anticipated by the patent claims, they are not patentably distinct from the patent claims.

Claims 54 and 56 are rejected under the judicially created doctrine of obviousness-type double patenting as being unpatentable over claims 6-10 of U.S.

Patent No. 6,283,912. Although the conflicting claims are not identical, they are not patentably distinct from each other because the subject matter claimed in the instant application is fully disclosed in the patent and is covered by the patent since the patent and the application are claiming common subject matter, as follows: the difference between the application claims and the patent claims lies in the fact that the patent claims include more elements and are thus much specific. Thus the invention of the patent claims are in effect a "species" of the "generic" invention of the application claims. It has been held that the generic invention is "anticipated" by the "species". See In re Goodman, 29 USPQ2d 2010 (Fed. Cir. 1993). Since the application claims are anticipated by the patent claims, they are not patentably distinct from the patent claims.

Claims 58-61 are rejected under the judicially created doctrine of obviousness-type double patenting as being unpatentable over claims 6, 7, 11, 10, 12 of U.S. Patent No. 6,283,912. Although the conflicting claims are not identical, they are not patentably distinct from each other because the subject matter claimed in the instant application is fully disclosed in the patent and is covered by the patent since the patent and the application are claiming common subject matter, as follows: the difference between the application claims and the patent claims lies in the fact that the patent claims include more elements and are thus much specific. Thus the invention of the patent claims are in effect a "species" of the "generic" invention of the application claims. It has been held that the generic invention is "anticipated" by the "species". See In re Goodman, 29 USPQ2d 2010 (Fed. Cir. 1993). Since the application claims are anticipated by the patent claims, they are not patentably distinct from the patent claims.

Allowable Subject Matter

Claims 39-48, 50, 53, 55, 57, 62 and 63 are objected to as being dependent upon a rejected base claim, but would be allowable if rewritten in independent form including all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims.

Response to Arguments

Applicant's arguments with respect to claims 35-38, 49, 51, 52, 54 and 58-61 have been considered but are moot in view of the new ground(s) of rejection.
